Madison Regatta on for July 2-4

Roostertail Music Festival set for Bicentennial Park

BY COURIER STAFF REPORT

After months of speculation, Madison Regatta President Greg Thorpe announced Thursday that the Madison Regatta & Roostertail Music Festival will be back on July 2-4, 2021, in Madison, Indiana.

The event, canceled last year along with the rest of the 2020 H1 Unlimited Hydroplane Series season due to the COVID-19 pandemic, will be back with a weekend of boat racing on the Ohio River — including the running of the APBA Gold Cup — and music at nearby Bicentennial Park in downtown Madison.

Coming off last year's cancellation, Regatta officials were unsure if they would be able to raise the more than half-million dollars needed to stage the race, festival and Roostertail Music Festival, but commitments from the Jefferson County Board of Tourism and the City of Madison — each pledged $50,000 toward the race — and a sponsorship by local industry Nucor Madison helped clear the way for the event to move forward.

"The board and I are excited to be able to bring the Madison Regatta event to our beautiful riverfront this year considering the hard year we all had. This will be great for our community as well as the many loyal race fans," Thorpe said. "We are eternally grateful for the financial support of the Jefferson County Board of Tourism, City of Madison and Visit Madison Inc. as well as our presenting sponsor Nucor Madison, among countless others."

The boat racing portion of the event will feature the H1 Unlimited Hydroplane Series competing for not only the Indiana Governor's Cup but also the APBA Gold Cup. The racing will also include the Grand Prix America series.

This year marks the 70th running of the Madison Regatta dating back to the 1949 season and not including a washout in 2013 and last year's race. The Indiana Governor's Cup has been awarded to the winner of the race every year since 1951.

This year will also mark the fifth time the city has hosted the APBA Gold Cup, the sport's premier trophy. Madison

STATE OF THE CITY

Courtney gives first progress report on work as mayor

BY MARK CAMPBELL

Fifteen months into his first term in office and almost 18 months since taking over as Madison Mayor following the death of former Mayor Damon Welch, Bob Courtney says he's still focused on his campaign "for a clean, safe and beautiful Madison" and he will accomplish that with "a head for business and a heart for Madison."

He paused that work briefly Thursday night for his first State of the City address since taking office in October 2019 — a speech he had hoped to give in March 2020 until other, more pressing, issues began occupying much of his time with the arrival of a virus pandemic not seen in the US for at least 100 years.

Mark Campbell

Mayor Bob Courtney discusses his plans for the city's future — reiterating his clean, safe and beautiful vision for Madison — during his State of the City address Thursday at Madison City Hall.

"We wanted to do this last year and we were planning it in February and we thought we'd do it in early March and in early March our plans changed — just like everybody else's did," Courtney told the 70 or so people who filled all but a few of the seats that were packed into the council chambers at Madison City Hall as well as anyone watching on the city's YouTube Channel. "Like the rest of our state and nation we joined together as a community to face COVID-19, a pandemic that ushered in massive unemployment,wrecked havoc on our economy and forced restrictions on our lives and our livelihoods, resulted in lockdowns and mandates and brought on a human toll that many families lost loved ones.

"I'm proud of our city and our residents for their perseverance. At times we felt like we were flying the plane while at the same time trying to learn to be the pilot. Every day was a new exercise, new information, new data to consume, new plans to make, pivoting," Courtney added. "But one thing we did that I am really proud of ... is we leaned into it. While lots of communities across the state and across the country closed, we leaned into it and our drumbeat that we marched to here was 'Let's find a way. Let's not be passive. Let's not take a back seat but let's find a way' because our community deserved it. We didn't look for the easy route. It's hard. It's still hard. But we always found a way."

Courtney noted that the city — its companies, employees and residents — mobilized to support the community and its business, industry and residents with the assistance of the state and nation. The city went after grants to help save its smaller businesses and the lower wage employees who work there. The city, with the support of council, found jobs for many of those laid off so that they could still draw a paycheck during the pandemic while completing work the city needed done but might otherwise have deferred.

Courtney noted that the test Madison got from COVID — and is still dealing with — was made manageable by the dedicated work of a strong city staff and the support of residents just like when the city dealt with the passing of Welch as he settled into office.

"We were tested before COVID-19," Courtney said. "We lost a true champion of faith and community" with the unexpected passing of Welch "but the city staff and community came together and provided a warm and helpful welcome as we began our service and for that I am incredibly grateful. And as we head into this year and beyond I am committed to honoring Mayor Welch's legacy and finishing the work he started."

Courtney, elected by a caucus, was allowed to serve out the remaining weeks of Welch's term and then began his own four-year term but on Thursday he pledged to not only see his predecessor's business finished but that Welch also be remembered with the renaming of a city park in his honor and memory.

"I'm committed to honor the legacy of Mayor Welch and finishing the work he started," Courtney said.

Moving forward, Courtney said his vision for Madison is the same as his campaign promises while running for office: "Improving community safety, increasing economic opportunity and improving our quality of life and place in the city of Madison."

He then went on to list his administration's work to make Madison cleaner, safer and more beautiful from the efforts to expand the PACE program to rehabilitate dilapidated housing and increase property values to support the city's tourism industry and work to upgrade the police department to

Sheriff's deputies appreciated by crash victim

BY BOB DEMAREE

Ryan Stout was driving through rural Jefferson County on a cold winter day on Jan. 19 when his vehicle went off the roadway and landed in a creek bed.

Needing help to get free and retrieve his belonging in the creek, it was Jefferson County Sheriff's Deputies Laura Pickel and Jeff Wheeler who responded, helping Stout out, rendering medical aid and helping to retrieve some important belongings from the creek while investigating the crash.

Stout was so appreciative of the officers' efforts that he created plaques for Wheeler and Pickel that were presented at Wednesday's meeting of the Jefferson County Sheriff's Merit Board.

"These deputies went above and beyond their required duties by helping retrieve articles from the vehicle and creek bed. For that effort, I wanted them to know it was greatly appreciated," said Stout.

He credited the officers for their professionalism and assistance above and beyond their responsibilities of duty. In particular, Stout told the officers how much he appreciated that they "kept me calm, and were kind and compassionate."

Stout's wife, Gerri Lee Stout, thanked the officers for "helping him and getting him back to me" after the accident. She said the officers reinstilled her husband's "faith in humanity by showing him kindness; that he had recently had doubts, but "you have strengthened his faith again."

In addition to the plaques, the Stouts provided a miniature polar bear in recognition of the extremely cold conditions the officers encountered during the creek rescue.

Wheeler and Pickel noted that others on the scene also deserved credit and that it is thanks enough that Stout is OK. "We had help from passersby and other citizens. It was not just us." Pickel said. "We were very happy to help."

"The citizens of Jefferson County support our local law enforcement. However, it truly brings me great pleasure to have a citizen reach out with this type of positive support," said Jefferson County Sheriff Dave Thomas.

Thomas said he was also recently contacted by the adult children of Roger and Jackie Sweet of Jefferson County for the "professionalism, care and compassion" provide to their parents by several area local law enforcement officers and dispatchers during a separate incident. He said they specifically named Pickel, Corporal Linton Spry and Sergeant Patrick Finnegan.

"This was the second time in that week that citizens contacted the Sheriff's Office to express appreciation of the employees of the agency. It is truly a great experience to hear of positive interactions between the deputies and the citizens of Jefferson County, Indiana," Thomas said.

Hanover men beat Manchester to take 3rd in HCAC

BY COURIER STAFF REPORT

Hanover men's soccer wrapped up the belated 2020 season with a 3-2 win over Manchester Wednesday at home to claim third place in the Heartland Collegiate Athletic Conference Tournament.

Instead of playing a traditional tournament, the HCAC opted to play out just one game each for positioning leaving the third-seeded Panthers facing off against the No. 4 seed Spartans for third place.

Manchester (6-4) actually got on the board first when Harley Kruschwitz scored off assists by Julian Keough and Cory Mitchell less than four minutes into the match.

Hanover answered quickly, getting an unassisted goal by Josh Hughes in the 6th minute and a marker from Luke Eppler in the 10th minute on an assist by Hughes.

Hanover maintained that 2-1 lead into halftime and added what turned out to be a crucial insurance goal in the 61st minute on a score by Ian Waldrop off an assist by Josh Hughes. The goal proved to be the game-winner when Kruschwitz found the back of the net for a second time in the 84th minute for the final margin.

Madison and Southwestern baseball unbeaten

Sophomore Ben Orrill continued his torrid start to the season, going 2-for-2 with a double, a walk and a run scored. Senior Zach Forner had an RBI.

Madison, now 7-0 on the season, took its unblemished record into a Friday night showdown with fellow unbeaten Southwestern in Hanover. Due to Madison Courier deadlines, story and photos from that game will appear in Tuesday's edition.

Madison returns to action on Tuesday when it travels to New Albany.

SOUTHWESTERN ROLLS OVER CARROLL

Southwestern made quick work of Carroll County, rolling to a 19-5 baseball win Wednesday in Carrollton.

Shaw started and allowed four earned runs in three innings. Isaacs got the loss in relief.

This underused IRS rule may help you increase your interest rate.

"Over the last ten to fifteen years, there have been many improvements to both life insurance and annuity products. If you've been thinking about swapping your current annuity or insurance policy for a new policy, a 1035 exchange might be a good solution."
- Stephen Dybwad

Layin' It on the Line

Created by a provision in the IRS code, 1035 exchanges offer a tax-deferred method of converting existing life insurance or annuity contracts to contracts that better fit your overall financial goals. Under 1035 rules, policyholders can transfer money from an endowment, annuity, or life insurance into a new policy without paying taxes at the time of transfer.
If you have a life insurance policy or annuity that you would like to upgrade to a better-designed product, you may want to consider the advantages of using a 1035 Exchange.

A 1035 exchange can defer the gain and help manage your future tax liability.
In a 1035 exchange, you are deferring the gain, which is the difference between the cash value of the policy at any time, including all policy loans, and the premium tax basis, which is the amount put into the contract, less premiums for additional benefits and minus any tax-free distributions. If there is no gain in the original contract, you might still take advantage of other 1035 Exchange tax benefits. These tax advantages are not available to you if you surrender the original contract.

A 1035 could help you avoid a "MEC" situation.
A 1035 exchange can help policy owners avoid something known as a "modified endowment contract," or MEC. Part of cash-value life insurance's appeal to consumers is that it gives them tax-free growth that they can access any time, for any reason.

However, the US Congress limits the amount of money that a person can place into these policies. Cash-value, or "permanent" life insurance and other vehicles, are now subject to a measurement known as the "Technical and Miscellaneous Revenue Act of 1988 seven pay test."

The 7-pay test computes how much of a new death benefit for 1 1035 exchange is (in theory) paid-up by proceeds from the exchange.

The formula subtracts this amount from the total death benefit, arriving at the death benefit's remaining unpaid portion.

The 7-pay test is then performed on this unpaid amount of insurance to determine how much new money can be paid into the contract every year. If that amount is negative, the policy fails the test, and no new money may be added to the existing contract.

Policies whose benefits exceed federal tax law limits are classified as MECs. MECS have some major tax disadvantages.

What kinds of exchanges can you do? There are different types of 1035 exchanges. These include:
- Life insurance for a non-qualified annuity contract
- Life insurance for an endowment
- Life insurance for life insurance
- Endowment for a non-qualified annuity product
- Non-qualified annuity for non-qualified annuity

When could a 1035 Exchange be appropriate?
If you think changes in your current situation merit, you may want to check with your financial advisor or insurance consultant to discuss a 1035 exchange feasibility.

Be sure your advisor tells you all the advantages and disadvantages of this type of transaction and allows you to be the sole decision-maker. The decision to replace a policy should be justifiable based on your economic or personal needs, and you should never terminate a policy until your new policy is issued.

Some things you should consider are:
- If you may have changes in your health may cause you to be denied new coverage or require you to pay more for coverage.
- Higher premiums, which might also result from the issuance of new coverage at a higher attained age.
- Surrender charges that could have a negative impact.
- Potential differences in the way interest is credited to your replacement policy.
- Changes in policy provisions and guarantees.
- Alternatives to replacement that you may not have considered.
- The impact of outstanding loans that could represent a partial gain.
- The current financial climate.
- Your own goals and desires.

Changes in the stock market and interest rates, better-designed contracts, and policies, and changing personal or financial needs are all reasons to speak with your financial expert about whether or not a 1035 exchange makes sense.

However, before beginning the exchange process, you should investigate all your options, understand potential pitfalls, and know the long-term implications. Class 2A No. 7 Hauser pulls away from Madison, 10-4

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

Playing for the sixth time in a five-day span and coming off an extra-innings win the night before, Madison softball coach Tim Torrance was just hoping to survive Wednesday's showdown with Class 2A No. 7 Hauser without any major injuries. Mission accomplished.

Madison was on the losing end of a 10-4 score to the Jets in a game that featured a 30-minute rain delay, six total errors and 11 total walks.

For Torrance, the game was more of a chance to rest than to pick up a win, especially after the Cubs played late in the night on Tuesday to beat New Albany in extra innings.

"This is our eighth game in eight days. We've played almost a third of our schedule in one week. It's been challenging," Torrance said. "This week was marathon games and it was just go, go, go. Tonight it was almost a matter of survival. I'll take the first four innings (before the rain) and cut it off there and be done with it. We did OK but we still have some things to work on."

David Campbell

Madison catcher Lexi Sullivan tags out Hauser's Kyra Meister (3) at the plate during Wednesday's game in Madison.

Madison trailed 5-2 after the fourth inning when heavy rains rolled in and shut down play for 30 minutes. The rest of the game was a mess on both sides with numerous wild pitches, walks and errors in less than ideal conditions.

Torrance sat his ace, Immi Mann, who had thrown nearly 700 pitches since Friday, and gave the ball to Kallie Eder. The freshman pitched well, allowing just four earned runs on six hits in four and a third innings before giving way to sophomore Ally Zuckschwerdt.

Eder's biggest issue was walks and errors behind her that extended nearly every inning. But the Cubs also turned three double plays in the game, a sign of what the team can be according to Torrance.

Madison's Keara Eder tracks down a ball to left field during Wednesday's loss to Hauser.

"They're understanding the game and we have the same problem everybody else in the state has, we didn't play last year. I have freshmen who haven't played since they were seventh graders," Torrance said. "We're trying to work out some of the issues, but this is academically a very smart team and I know they'll get it."

Hauser scored solo runs in the first and third innings then pushed three across in the top of the fourth to take a 5-0 lead. Madison responded in the bottom half of the fourth with two runs of its own when Lexi Sullivan and Cam Mann each singled, Immi Mann drove in a run with a single, and Cam Mann scored on a dropped third strike.

Hauser scored three more times in the fifth after the rain and got two more in the sixth to put the game away. Madison added two more runs but got no closer.

Madison managed just four singles in the game with Zuckschwerdt collecting a hit in the sixth inning.

Kyra Meister, Hannah Taylor and Reagan Johnson had two hits each to lead Hauser. Paige McDaniel picked up the win.

Madison, now 3-5 on the season, hosted Silver Creek on Friday in a game that was moved up a day from Saturday due to the weather. The Cubs host Jennings County on Monday.

Kira Wells pitched all seven innings in the circle and took the loss after allowing just six earned runs on 14 hits with two strikeouts and three walks.

Shawe, now 0-1 both overall and in the ORVC, had its game on Thursday against South Central postponed. The Hilltoppers travel to Jac-Cen-Del on Monday.

Shaw scored the winning run in the bottom of the eighth after he singled, advanced to second on David Smith's hit and scored on an error.

Smith picked up the win with a scoreless inning in relief. Luke Staley worked the first seven innings and gave up a run on three hits with seven strikeouts.

SHAWE LOSES TIGHT BATTLE WITH MILAN

Shawe battled until the final out before falling 5-4 to Milan in the Hilltoppers' baseball season opener on Thursday.

Milan used a four-run fourth inning to pull ahead 5-1 and still led 5-2 entering the bottom of the seventh when Shawe nearly pulled out the win. Christian Whitham opened the frame by drawing a walk and went to third on a single by Jacob Hertz. Philip Kahn then brought both runners home with a double in the gap.

But the Hilltoppers were unable to get Kahn home and the rally fell a run short.

"Overall I was very pleased with how we played tonight especially considering this was our first game of the season and how young we are. We have 10 first year players (seven freshmen and three sophomores) and only two juniors. No seniors," Shawe coach Geno Pawlak said. "Our inexperience showed a little tonight in the fourth inning. We probably should have limited the damage to two runs max. But I liked the effort and know that we will only get better."

Hertz was 3-for-4 with two RBIs and two runs scored to lead the Hilltoppers while Kahn was 2-for-3 with two RBIs. Zach Gish also had two hits.

Hunter Kennett started on the mound and allowed only three hits in three innings. Wyatt Nichter allowed four runs on five hits in four innings of a relief and took the loss.

Shawe, now 0-1 overall and in the Ohio River Valley Conference, heads to Jac-Cen-Del on Monday.

Dalton Penick started and took the loss after giving up seven runs on six hits in four innings with eight strikeouts and nine walks.

Trimble, now 0-5 on the season, plays in the All "A" Classic Eighth Region Tournament in Tuesday.

address the community's narcotics problems. He noted that police department procedures were reviewed and updated and officer compensation was improved. Additionally, he mentioned existing work and future plans to upgrade roads and sidewalks and to improve the city's gateways and preserve green space along the Ohio River.

Courtney noted that much of that work took money — some of it city money and some of it grants — but that investment has also paid off in additional private investment.

"We fully believe we can attract private capital when we are willing to lead with our own capital first," he said.

A bonus to that investment comes in improved quality of life as crime rates drop, dilapidated structures are refreshed and programs like the park system are restructured to make taxpayer dollars go farther and allow more improvements over a wider area.

"Quality of life. That's an economic driver," Courtney said. "That's why people want to be here for tourism, those who want to live here and those who want to work here," Courtney said.

Councilman Dan Dattilo, the only Democrat elected official in the city, got a brief taste of Courtney's job when, as council pro tem, he became interim mayor for about three weeks after the death of Welch. He said Courtney has done a good job and has assembled a strong staff.

"I think they're doing a good job and being very organized and I'm happy with everything right now," Dattilo said of Courtney and his administration. "We've overcome a lot for sure. I think Mayor Courtney has a really good staff that helps him out and that's always a positive. They're unified. I don't have anything negative to say and I'm the kind of person that if I disagree with you, I'll have to say that. I've done that a couple of times but I think in general we're moving in the right direction ... We had some tax money coming in, in a couple of ways that we were not expecting and we were able to use that in some positive ways so we've had some wins ... when we said we can hire some people who have lost jobs during this, I knew we were going in the right direction and we did just that."

Courtney started out his address by relaying how, he is "humbled and honored" as a kid from Walnut Street who has felt the community wrap its arms around him as a child, now as mayor of the city and in the future.

He ended by saying the work to "make Madison a better place and the city we all dream about" is not done.

REGATTA

previously hosted the race in 1971, 1979, 1980 and 2019 and was supposed to stage the event a year ago as part of its two-year agreement with H1 Unlimited. Jim McCormick drove the community-owned Miss Madison to victory in 1971 and Jimmy Shane equaled the feat with the team two years ago.

Madison Mayor Bob Courtney noted the community has always supported its race team and boat racing as fans and partners because what is good for boat racing is good for Madison.

"It is ironic that we find ourselves in a similar situation as Mayor Don Vaughn was in 50 years ago searching for ways to bring the Regatta to the City of Madison," Courtney said of the town's efforts to land the Gold Cup for McCormick's historic win in 1971. "The Madison Regatta is an iconic event with deep community roots but even more so, it is an economic driver for the community's tourism economy and we found it very compelling to work with the Regatta Board and its volunteers to join with the Jefferson County Board of Tourism to financially support the event this year."

Although not as steeped in history as the boat races, the companion Roostertail Music Festival will once again include two days of music at Bicentennial Park in what before the pandemic hit was one of the fastest growing music festivals in Indiana.

The Roostertail Music Festival will begin Friday night after the annual Regatta/City of Madison Parade on Main Street with another evening of music on Saturday. The line-up of Roostertail entertainers will be posted soon and can be found online at www.MadisonRegatta.com/music/.

Although slightly smaller and slower than the H1 Unlimiteds, the Grand Prix America series puts the thunder in thunderboat racing as the premier supercharged automotive class of powerboats in the nation with speeds upwards of 160 mph.

"Its pure excitement for us at Grand Prix America to be a part of the Madison Regatta and all its historical glory," said Dean Rojas, president of GPA. "We look forward to getting back on the water in Madison, Indiana!"

Tickets can now be purchased online. General admission, which allows entry to both the Madison Regatta and Roostertail Music Festival, costs $30 now through April 30; $40 May 1 through June 26; and $50 after June 27 when tickets will only be available at select locations and/or the gate.

Still a stepmom

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: I am a stepmother to a beautiful woman whom I love very much. She has given us three beautiful granddaughters and a handsome grandson. Sadly, my husband has a very rare and very aggressive form of cancer and it looks terminal.

My question for you: Do I continue to be a stepmother after his passing? I know it's most likely up to her, but I was curious about the proper protocol. This will help me determine how I introduce her to others. Will she always be my stepdaughter, or does she become my late husband's daughter? — Stumped Step

Dear Stumped: I'm so sorry to hear about your husband. I encourage you to continue calling her "stepdaughter" and treating her as a daughter. You two will need each other more than ever in the years to come.

Dear Annie: A few weeks ago, my husband and I were supposed to attend a funeral of a very dear friend, two hours away from our home. The service was at 2 p.m. The morning of the funeral, I woke up with a migraine and quickly took some meds. I fixed my husband's breakfast, and he told me he was waiting to hear from another friend about having lunch together prior to the services. I asked why he hadn't told me about the plans, and he said he shouldn't have to. (We've been married 50 years.) I was hoping for a little more time to allow the migraine to diminish and told him that. We would have to leave by 10 o'clock, and I had not even showered.

Instead, he started accusing me of not letting him see his friends. He was livid and left to go alone... at 10:00 without having heard from anyone. The funeral was at 2 p.m.

My migraine had not gotten any better (and the circumstances probably made it worse), so I ended up staying home.

Was I wrong to be upset because he didn't share his plans for us with me? If he'd told me, I could at least have tried to get ready to leave earlier. — Sad Wife

Dear Sad: Talk to your husband about what happened. But rather than focusing on who was wrong or right, simply let him know how it made you feel.

While there's no good excuse for his storming out in that manner and leaving you behind, I'm inclined to give people more leeway right now. Everyone is feeling a little on edge lately, more than a year into a global pandemic. Add to that the fact that you two had just lost a good friend, and it's not surprising that emotions have been running high. I'm sorry for your loss.

Dear Annie: I think it would be beneficial for you to let your readers know about DivorceCare, a network of support groups offering a 13-week seminar helping people who have been through a divorce. People who are separated or divorced can get great help by visiting www.divorcecare.org and looking up a place that offers this fantastic program near their ZIP code. — M.S.

Dear M.S.: Thanks so much for recommending this resource. If someone is unable to connect with a DivorceCare group in their area, I've heard good things about the online support groups at Psych Central, which can be accessed at www.psychcentralforums.com/divorce-and-separation

Caffeine fiend

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: I work in a small office with only four employees and one supervisor. Two of my colleagues and I are coffee drinkers. Instead of starting a coffee fund, we started taking turns bringing in a fresh container when we find the previous one is running low. This system has worked for us and has prevented any issues from arising.

What we do have an issue with is our supervisor helping himself to the coffee without ever offering to chip in for his share. This has been going on for almost a year, and the three of us are really getting fed up. It has gotten to the point where we will purposely get less coffee just so he won't have a chance to get any. I realize this might be petty, but I don't know how to make him understand that he is taking advantage. All we want is for him to contribute his fair share.

How can we approach this subject with him? What can we say to make him realize he is in the wrong? — The Fa"brew"lous Three

Dear Fa"brew"lous Three: The way you signed your letter indicates an exclusive club in which outsiders might not feel welcome. Now, since the troublemaker is your boss, the three of you have to make a decision: Is it worth it to upset your supervisor? If not, then decide in advance that the three of you will pay for him.

But if you really resent that — because it is unfair — then I would suggest putting a coffee plan for the office in writing and asking everyone who drinks coffee, including the supervisor, to participate. The plan should be impersonal: If three workers participate, the cost — or responsibility for bringing a container — will be so much, and if four people participate, the cost per person will be that much less. If he refuses to participate and continues to drink your coffee, then you can either tell him to cut it out or report his behavior to his boss.

The main thing is to keep it impersonal. Don't attack him for being a mooch. Just lay out the numbers for everyone to see.

Dear Annie: My husband of almost 20 years died in a motorcycle accident. Since then, I was unintentionally reacquainted with my first kiss/boyfriend, "Fred." We met again, literally, the same week my mom died. We both fell hard in love with each other.

After enduring numerous horrific drunken hurtful situations with Fred over a period of five years, who never told me he blacks out when he drinks alcohol, I am finding myself wondering how much of our five-year relationship he remembers. Does he remember it as I do? We live apart in our own houses.

He helps me a lot. He's my mechanic, landscaper and handyman, and he's also a friend. He knows that I've been dating and seeing other men the entire time we've been apart. Knowing that he experienced a traumatic head injury, do I dare try a relationship with him again? He doesn't drink any longer. He said he has no apparent desire to. Do I give him another opportunity to make a life together? — Second Chances

Dear Second Chance: I'm very sorry that you suffered the loss of your husband. Fred sounds like he is trying. The fact that he does not drink anymore is huge and would change the dynamics of your relationship. However, without more specifics about this traumatic head injury, it if difficult to know how that could change your relationship. Are you ready to support him through any subsequent mental, emotional or physical traumas? If you love him, he loves you and you're both going into this relationship with your eyes open, then go for it. If he starts drinking again or if you're not on the same page, then it's time to say goodbye to Fred.
